Saturday, Jan. 20th San Jacinto Blvd. between E. 15th St. & E 12th St.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

1. Study the Austin International Half formally 3M Half Marathon Course Map (page 2) to see if your trip will start, end, or cross anywhere near the half marathon course.
2. Use the Pace Chart (page 3) to see if your trip time will conflict with the half marathon.
3. Use the Zone Map (page 4) to see which areas of the course you may need to look at in detail.
4. Look at the detailed information and map for those zones (pages 5-10).

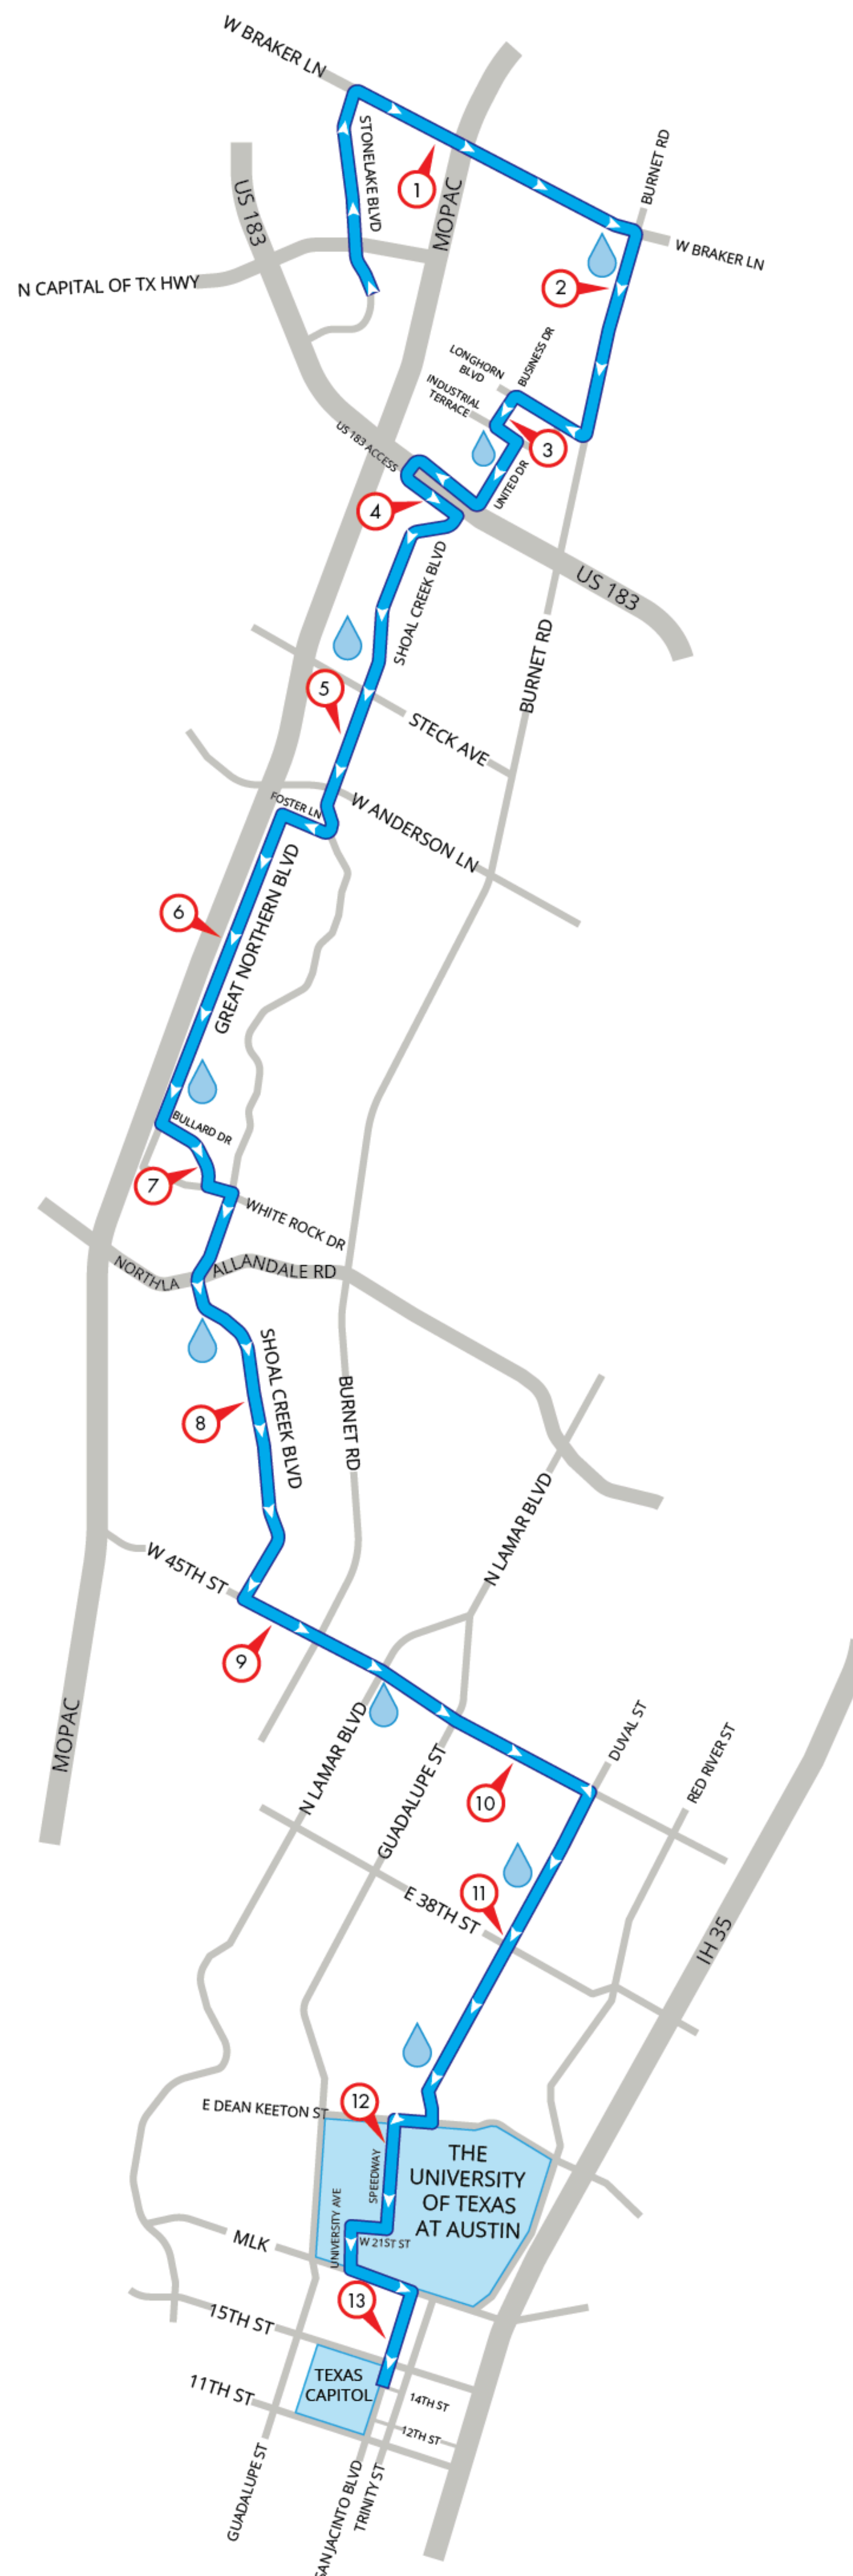

GENERAL TIPS

- Assume you can't cross the course : Crossing the half marathon course with a vehicle is extremely difficult, and should be avoided. The Austin Police Department will only allow crossings at major intersections, and only when there are no runners present.
- Park strategically: If your trip starts or ends near a section of the course, sometimes the best option may be to park on the more accessible side of the course and walk.
- Use MoPac, & I-35: These roads are unobstructed for northbound and southbound travel.
- Use Ben White Blvd. (Hwy 290) and US 183: These roads are unobstructed for eastbound and westbound travel.
- Use Google Maps & Waze: On race day, the best traffic information can be found on sites and apps like Google Maps (maps.google.com) and Waze (waze.com). The Austin International Half street closures are submitted to these programs in advance, and they will display the closures and the associated traffic.

PAGE CHART

The Austin International Half, formally 3M Half Marathon Course Map uses a rolling course closure to minimize the impact on traffic. The City of Austin will shut down all roads along the course by 6:30 AM on race day to ensure the course is ready for runners. Course crossings at major intersections will remain open until just before the first runner arrives. These intersections will remain closed while runners are present and will reopen following the final runner.

The following chart shows the times that runners are projected to pass through each mile marker on the half marathon course. Use this to get a rough idea of when major intersections will close and reopen.
